Island of the Blue Dolphins, Introduction

Island of the Blue Dolphins by Scott O'Dell

Focus and goals of this unit: Our goal for this unit is for students to write a 500-700 word narrative.

Unit Roadmap

- Unit's big idea or theme = Responsibility requires Action
- Definition: Responsibility is the active side of morality: doing what I should do, doing what I said I would do, doing what is best for everybody; especially doing the one thing I should be doing right now. Ideally this would be posted in your classroom.

Major written product: Narrative Essay, the steps of the essay are embedded in the lesson plan so students can work progressively toward their final writing product. A general overview is listed below.

STEP 1: Autobiography/personal narrative:

- The goal of this unit is for you to write a personal narrative about a specific event in your life.
- Think of a memorable experience that happened over a short period of time.

STEP 2:

- Fill out a 5W's chart to help you collect your details.

STEP 3: Finish rough draft and review effective traits

- We are going to use this first personal narrative of the year to introduce the traits of effective writing.
- Note to teacher: Throughout this unit we will be revisiting the students' personal narratives and making revisions by examining different traits of effective writing. While a student and a teacher do not need to examine every trait in detail every time they write something, this initial writing activity provides us an opportunity to slow things down and take a closer look at what makes good writing.
- The object here is to focus on the process of revision- not just the product, or getting it turned in. For some of your students, this idea will take some getting used to.

STEP 4: Revising→Focus on Organization

- Today, take a closer look at how you have organized your paper. Jot down how you decided to tell your story. Did you start at the beginning and go to the end? Did you start with the ending and then cut to the beginning? When writing creatively, an author has choices to make. The choices he or she makes impact the reader's experience.
- Share your writing with a peer. Get feedback and make revisions. Do they think your story is well organized? How could it be clearer and stronger?

STEP 5: Revision and word choice

- Take a pencil and circle all the verbs in your paper.
- Then, go back and think about how you could make some of your choices more specific and colorful.
- Teachers, model what this could look like.
- Teachers, you may also want to put up a 'boring word graveyard' on your wall. This is where you and the students decide on all the words that are 'dead' and that should not be used too often because they aren't specific enough. Examples: nice, pretty, beautiful etc. These can be verbs, nouns or modifiers.
- Also, start another word list on the wall that contains descriptive, creative, active verbs.
- Remember to remind students to use the thesaurus as necessary.
- After they have gone through and revised their verbs, have them do the same thing with nouns.

STEP 6: Revision with modifiers (specifically adverbs today)

- Take a look at your paper. By now you have added more colorful verbs.
- Circle any adverbs you already have in your paper.
- Can you revise any of these to make your writing clearer to your reader?
- Now go back and ask yourself if there are any additional adverbs you would like to add.
- Make those changes

STEP 7: Revision with modifiers (specifically adjectives today)

- Look at your paper. You have added more specific nouns.
- Circle any adjectives you already have in your paper.
- Can you revise any of these to make your writing clearer to your reader?
- Now go back and ask yourself if there are any additional adjectives you would like to add.
- Make those changes/additions.

STEP 8: Revision and voice

- Think of a song or singer that you think has a strong voice in his or her music.
- How would you describe that voice?
- You have the same thing. You are a unique individual with your own voice.

- Share your writing with someone who knows you and your voice-either a peer, teacher, aide, or parent. Ask them if you think your writing sounds like YOU.
- What could you add to make it sound more like you?
- Make revisions as necessary.

STEP 9: Revision and dialogue

- Add at least 1 series of dialogue to your story.

STEP 10: Revision and reflections

- Add reflections where you see appropriate.

STEP 11: Revision and sentence style

- Vary your sentence length and structure.
- Examine transitions.
- Are your sentences easy to hear/listen to?
- Make appropriate revisions.

STEP 12: Editing and correct copy

- Have students correct punctuation, spelling, grammar and capitalization
- Tomorrow they will peer edit, so don't have them write their final copies yet.

STEP 13: GROUP/PEER ADVISING

- Students should practice being in the listener's role and give constructive feedback to a peer.

STEP 14: Response checklist

- Have students use the checklist to guide any last responses to their paper.
- Word process final drafts.

What are The Channel Islands and the Aleutian Islands. The Channel Islands are a string of islands off the coast of California. They are approximately 1 mile off the coast from the Santa Barbara Area to the Southern California Area. The islands were home to various different tribes of people throughout history.

The Aleutian Islands are located off the coast of Alaska. Both islands are great hunting areas. At the beginning of the novel the Aleutian Tribe comes to hunt on the Island of the Blue Dolphins. The tribes clash and most of Karana's tribe is killed during the fight.

RESPOND

Timeline Agree on the facts in today's reading and list the 3–5 most important on the timeline.

Students might mention

- Karana and her brother Ramo, spot a big ship with red sails.
- The men on the ship land on the island and tell their father (the Chief) that they are there to hunt sea otters.
- The Captain tried to make a deal with the Chief that entailed his men getting twice as much as the island people.
- The Chief disagreed and told him the parts must be equal.
- The Captain and his men come from the north.
- The tribe rejoiced in finding some bass to eat.
- The Aleuts asked them to share and the Chief said no, he had to think of his people first.

Discussion Comprehension and higher-level questions for discussion.

Key Questions – Day 1

1. What does Karana's other name Won-a-pa-lei mean? Why do the tribe members have a secret name? What would this be equivalent to in modern times?
2. What position does her father play in the tribe?
3. Why have Captain Orlov and his men come to the island?
4. Where is the Captain from?
5. What deal does the Captain try to make with the Chief?
6. What differences are most apparent between the two groups of men?

7. What is the definition of the term foreshadow? Do you think the author is trying to foreshadow any events at the end of Chapter 2?

Analyze Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, pp.6–7

“The parts must be equal,’ my father said. Captain Orlov gazed off toward the sea.

‘We can talk of that later when my supplies are safe ashore,’ he replied...

‘It is better to agree now,’ said my father” (pp.6–7).

EXTEND

Write Have each student write a short product based on today’s prompt to connect to the unit theme.

Why do you think the Chief wanted to agree on an arrangement before letting the Captain and his men on the island? Is it helpful to agree to the terms of something before committing? What do you risk if you don’t do this?

Think of a time you did not agree to certain terms with a friend or family member. Write a one-paragraph narrative (real or imagined) in which you share an experience where you did not agree to terms prior to an arrangement being made.

Engage your reader. Introduce your characters. Use narrative techniques to develop the experience. Use transitional words to convey sequence. Use precise words and phrases to capture action and convey your experience. Provide a conclusion that follows form and reflects on the experiences of the event.

Key Questions – Day 2

1. Why were the men hunting the otters? Do you think they were respecting the tribe or the island as they were hunting? How did Karana feel about their hunting?
2. What is the major difference between Karana and the Aleutian's as it relates to hunting and the animals on the island?
3. In general, did the island people trust the Aleuts and the captain? How can you tell?
4. What was the original agreement between the Captain and the chief? What was the Captain trying to trade? Is there fairness in this exchange? How was the chief trying to get what his tribe deserved? Do you think he was acting responsibly as he confronted the captain? Explain.
5. Why did a fight break out? What happened?
6. Do you think the Aleuts ever intended to give the tribe an equal share of the pelts? Do you think the tribe deserved an equal share? Explain.
7. What will happen now that the chief and Karana's father is dead?

Analyze Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 15

"The sea otter, when it is swimming, looks like a seal, but different. It has a shorter nose than a seal, small webbed feet instead of flippers, and fur that is thicker and much more beautiful...The otter likes to lie on its back in the kelp beds, floating up and down to the motion of the waves, sunning itself or sleeping. They are the most playful animals in the sea" (p. 15)

Further information taken from:

The biology of animals that have been traditionally hunted is usually well known. Throughout the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries Enhydra lutris, the sea otter, was heavily exploited by man, prized universally for its exceptionally warm, sleek and tremendously valuable pelt. Subsequently, in order to maximize harvest yield, the human predatory machine studied sea otter biology intently. This cute, furry, charismatic species was so well hunted that it was extirpated along most of its historical range in North America. A second wave of study in sea otter biology was initiated at the beginning of the twentieth century in efforts to prevent the animal's extinction. Recent studies of E. lutris appear to emerge from all areas of science. Currently, numerous scientific papers are being published on many different scales in the disciplines of physiology, ecology, behavior, pathology, and conservation of this animal. The resources utilized in the synthesis of this page represent a very minute fraction of the myriad of past and current publications dedicated to Enhydra lutris.

Responsibility Requires Action. Responsibility is the active side of morality: doing what I should do, doing what I said I would do, doing what is best for everybody; especially doing the one thing I should be doing right now.

What is abalone? What has happened to them over time? Abalones are sub-tidal marine snails that were once very abundant throughout the west coast, from Alaska to California. Their shell is ear-like in shape and they like to graze algae by scraping it off rocks with their spiny-toothed tongue, or radula. These gastropods take about four years to reach reproductive age and reproduce by broadcasting their gametes (eggs and sperm) out into the water column, making it vital that they be near each other during breeding season.

The meat was highly prized, and the lustrous shells were used in jewelry and adornment. The abalone's population remained stable until the advent of SCUBA in the 1970's, which allowed abalone to be harvested commercially at very high rates. They soon became over-harvested and their populations were no longer able to sustain themselves.

In today's reading much of Karana's tribe has died in the battle with the Aleuts. The tribe elected a new chief who divided the labor between the men and woman so the tribe will survive. Karana and her sister were asked to harvest abalone and her brother was tasked with keeping them safe from the birds as they dried. This is a main staple food through the winter.

2. What is the unit of time measured by a moon? How long was the tribe on the island before the ship returned?
3. Kimki was appointed chief. What was his first order of business? How did the women feel about their new roll in the tribe? How did the men react?
4. The village is in mourning. Do you think the reaction would have been the same if they lost a few men versus much of the tribe? What exemplified the loss? How could the reaction to the loss differed if there were some in the tribe who could support others?
5. Why does Kimki decide to leave? How long was he gone? How did his departure help the tribe? What does Matasaip have the tribe do to prepare for the Aleuts or any other invader? Do you think he is wise or fearful?
6. When the feared ship finally arrives, what do we find out? Would you willingly go on a journey with the men in the ship? What do the members of the tribe have to gain? What do they have to lose? Why do they want to leave?
7. What does Karana take with her to leave the island? Why did she make that choice? If you were leaving your home, what would you take? How would they help you survive? What is their value to you?

Analyze Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 35

“I filled my baskets with the things I wished to take. Three fine needles of whalebone, an awl for making holes, a good stone knife for scraping hides, two cooking pots, and a small box made from a shell with many earrings in it” (p. 35).

Write Have each student write a short product based on today's prompt to connect to the unit theme.

Think about a time you had to make a choice (real or imagined). It could be between something tangible or intangible.

Write a narrative in which you describe the choice you had to make and how it affected you. Engage and orient the reader by establishing a context and point of view and introducing a narrator and/or characters; organize an event sequence that unfolds naturally and logically. Use dialogue, pacing, and description, to develop experiences, events, and/or characters. Use a variety of transition words, phrases, and clauses to convey sequence and signal shifts from one frame to another. Use precise words and phrases, relevant descriptive details, and sensory language to capture the action and convey experiences and

What is a rite of passage? A rite of passage is any event or ceremony, which defines one stage of life to the next. A significant birthday, marriage, graduation, driving, etc.

In today's reading Ramo declares himself chief. Karana is tolerant but she knows this declaration will make it harder for her to care for and control him and his impulses. Karana tries to tell him that he cannot be chief as he has not gone through the rite of passage to become one. In this situation tests that determine his worth.

What is the North Star? How is it used for navigation? The reason Polaris is so important is because the axis of Earth is pointed almost directly at it. During the course of the night, Polaris does not rise or set, but remains in very nearly the same spot above the northern horizon year-round while the other stars circle around it. So at any hour of the night, at any time of the year you can readily find Polaris and it is always found in a due northerly direction. If you were at the North Pole, the North Star would be directly overhead.

<http://www.space.com/15567-north-star-polaris.html>

Knowing how to find the North Star in the northern hemisphere is one of the most basic survival skills. Those of us in the north are fortunate to have the North Star as a handy survival tool for determining direction without a compass. Visible from the surface of the earth during clear nights, nearly everybody has heard of this celestial body and most probably feel confident they would be able to find the North Star whenever they choose. In ancient times locating this lodestar was crucial to navigating long distances through the wilderness. The beauty of using the North Star for navigation is that unlike a magnetic compass the North Star always points to true north. There is no magnetic declination to deal with. By sheer luck, the northern axis of the earth points directly toward the North Star. This means that when you are observing this star you are facing true north toward the North Pole. Because of this we also call the North Star the Polestar or Polaris, its astronomic name. When you are facing the North Star you are looking toward true north. This is because by chance this lodestar lines up with the celestial sphere almost perfectly, so that all other stars appear to rotate around it. Simply by finding the North Star travelers are able to determine all the points of the compass: westward would be on your left, eastward to the right, and southward in back of you.

In today's reading Karana decides to leave the island. She goes to the place they store the canoes and starts her journey. She uses the North Star as her guide for two nights. The canoe starts to leak and she realizes she cannot complete her journey. She returns to the island followed by a pod of dolphins and she is glad to be "home".

Write Have each student write a short product based on today’s prompt to connect to the unit theme.

Karana has respect for the ocean but is not feeling fearful. She is taking responsibility for herself and thinks it is the right thing to leave the island in search for land. Later when she is at sea, she must make another decision that also requires that she make a responsible decision and act on it.

Think of a time you had to act responsibly. Write a one-paragraph narrative in which you describe a real or imagined experience. Engage and orient the reader by establishing a context and point of view and introducing a narrator and/or characters; organize an event sequence that unfolds naturally and logically. Use narrative techniques. Use a variety of transition words, phrases, and clauses to convey sequence and signal shifts from one frame to another. Use precise words and phrases. Provide a conclusion that follows from and reflects on the narrated experiences or events.

What are Elephant Seals? Elephant seals, Mirounga angustirostris, are true seals, or earless seals, members of the pinniped suborder. What marvelous creatures they are: huge blubbery males with the pendulous noses that give these beasts their name; winsome females whose faces seem to be etched with a permanent smile; and endearing plump babies with big brown eyes.

In the 1880's northern elephant seals were thought to be extinct, harvested by shore whalers and sealers for their blubber. The oil obtained from elephant seals is second in quality only to the sperm whale. A small group of between 20-100 elephant seals that bred on Guadalupe Island, off Baja California, survived the ravages of the seal hunts. Protected first by Mexico and later by the United States, they have steadily expanded their range. Today they are protected from hunting and harassment by the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972. The total population estimate for northern elephant seals in 2006 is around 170,000.

The breeding season begins in late November when mature bulls begin to arrive and fight to determine dominance. The females start arriving in the middle of December and continue to arrive until the middle of February. The first birth is around Christmas, but most births usually occur during the last two weeks of January. The females remain on the beach for about five weeks from the time they come ashore. Amazingly, the males are on the beach for up to 100 days. The seals are fasting while they are on land, and both males and females lose about 1/3 of their body weight during the breeding season.

Elephant seals form harems, in which the dominant, or alpha, male is surrounded by a group of females. On the periphery of the harem, the beta bulls wait in hopes of an opportunity to mate. They assist the alpha bull in keeping away the less dominant males. Fights between males can be bloody affairs in which the combatants rear up and slam their bodies against each other, slashing with their large canine teeth. However, not all confrontations end in battle. Rearing up on their hindquarters, throwing back their heads, showing off the size of their noses and bellowing threats is enough to intimidate most challengers. When battles do occur, it is rarely to the death.

The rookery is a very noisy place during the breeding season as males bellow threat vocalizations, pups squawk to be fed, and females squabble with each other over prime location and pups. Gargles, grunts, snorts, belches, bleats, whimpers, squeaks, squeals, and the male trumpeting combine to create the elephant seal symphony of sound.

In today's reading Karana determines a good location for her new home. She decides she needs to make better weapons and for that needs Elephant Seal teeth. She goes to the beach as two males begin to fight.

What is the history of Herbal Medicine? The history of herbal medicine goes back many thousands of years. It is a form of medicine that has been practiced all over the world. Herbal medicine utilizes the leaves, seeds, roots, and flowers of plants in order to treat or prevent illness.

Early tribes developed their knowledge of plants, and most tribes had a specialist in using plants and herbs medicinally who was usually one of the most powerful people in the community. The first written record of the use of herbal medicine dates back nearly five thousand years to China.

In today's reading Karana is injured and does not have herbs to help her leg heal. She stays in the shelter as long as she can and then has to leave to get water. She is followed by the dogs and concerned for her safety. She then decides she needs to have a second shelter so she is prepared for any type of situation.

What is a devilfish? The common octopus would be unique for its appearance alone, with its massive bulbous head, large eyes, and eight distinctive arms. But by far the most striking characteristic of the octopus is the wide array of techniques it uses to avoid or thwart attackers.

It's first—and most amazing—line of defense is its ability to hide in plain sight. Using a network of pigment cells and specialized muscles in its skin, the common octopus can almost instantaneously match the colors, patterns, and even textures of its surroundings. Predators such as sharks, eels, and dolphins swim by without even noticing it.

When discovered, an octopus will release a cloud of black ink to obscure its attacker's view, giving it time to swim away. The ink even contains a substance that dulls a predator's sense of smell, making the fleeing octopus harder to track. Fast swimmers, they can jet forward by expelling water through their mantles. And their soft bodies can squeeze into impossibly small cracks and crevices where predators can't follow.

If all else fails, an octopus can lose an arm to escape a predator's grasp and regrow it later with no permanent damage. They also have beaklike jaws that can deliver a nasty bite, and venomous saliva, used mainly for subduing prey. Considered the most intelligent of all invertebrates, the common octopus is found in the tropical and temperate waters of the world's oceans. They can grow to about 4.3 feet (1.3 meters) in length and weigh up to 22 pounds (10 kilograms), although averages are much smaller. They prey on crabs, crayfish, and mollusks, and will sometimes use their ink to disorient their victims before attacking.

How do you sun dry food? The high sugar and acid content of fruits make them safe to dry out-of-doors when conditions are favorable for drying. Vegetables (with the exception of vine dried beans) and meats are not recommended for out-of-doors drying. Vegetables are low in sugar and acid. This increases the risks for food spoilage. Meats are high in protein, making them ideal for microbial growth when heat and humidity cannot be controlled. It is best to dry meats and vegetables indoors using controlled conditions of an oven or food dehydrator.

Sun-dried raisins are the best known of all dried foods. California produces much of the world's supply of raisins. In the San Joaquin Valley, warm temperatures, low humidity and a constant breeze are ideal conditions for drying grapes.

To dry fruits out-of-doors hot, dry, breezy days are best. A minimum temperature of 85°F is needed with higher temperatures being better. It takes several days to dry foods out-of-doors. Because the weather is uncontrollable, drying fruits out-of-doors can be risky. If it rains in California while the grapes are drying, the entire supply of raisins can be destroyed.

High humidity in the South is a problem for drying fruits out-of-doors. A humidity below 60 percent is best. Often these ideal conditions are not available when the fruit ripens and other alternatives to dry the food are needed.

Fruits dried out-of-doors must be covered or brought under shelter at night. The cool night air condenses and could add moisture back to the food, thus slowing down the drying process.

Equipment

Racks or screens placed on blocks allow for better air movement around the food. Because the ground may be moist, it is best to place the racks or screens on a concrete driveway or if possible over a sheet of aluminum or tin. The reflection of the sun on the metal increases the drying temperature.

RESPOND

Timeline Agree on the facts in today's reading and list the 3–5 most important on the timeline.

Students might mention

- A girl slightly older than her found her.
- She does not trust her because she is an Aleut.
- Karana is preparing to leave and stay somewhere else on the island.
- The other girl makes a gesture that Rontu is her dog.
- Finally, the Aleuts leave and the island feels quiet.

Key Questions – Day 12

1. Who is Karana more fearful of the men or the girl who is with them? Explain. Do you think her fears are valid?
2. How did Karana adapt her life so she could survive unnoticed? How did that impact her and Rontu?
3. When Karana finished her skirt she was giddy. Why was she so pleased? Have you ever finished something that made you that proud?
4. How did Rontu react when he saw the girl? What did Karana learn about her? What does it say about her character that she does not claim him?
5. How did Tutok and Karana's relationship evolve over time? Is that traditionally how relationships get stronger? What were some similarities and differences? Do you think Tutok was as lonely as Karana was? Explain.
6. What did Tutok bring for Karana? What did Karana do in return? How was this act symbolic?
7. Do you think that Karana will become lonelier now she has had human contact?

Analyze Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 146

"Below me, Rontu was running along the cliff, barking at the screaming gulls. Pelicans were chattering as they fished the blue water. Far off I could hear the bellow of a sea elephant. But suddenly, as I thought of Tutok, the island seemed very quiet" (p. 146).

Write Have each student write a short product based on today's prompt to connect to the unit theme.

Have you ever been separated from someone important to you? How did Karana cope with this? How did you cope?

Write a one-paragraph narrative in which you describe a time a friend or loved one left (real or imagined). Introduce the scenario and engage your reader by introducing the characters and the narrator. Organize your scenario so the events unfold logically. Use narrative techniques such as dialog, description, and experiences to develop your characters. Use a variety of transition words, phrases, and clauses to convey sequence. Use precise words, phrases, and language to give detail. Provide a conclusion, which reflects on the event.

How are sea animals rehabilitated? When a "patient" is admitted, our staff performs all necessary procedures under the direction and protocols set by the Animal Care Director and our Veterinary Medical Director. During the course of rehabilitation, animals require a variety of treatments such as administration of antibiotics and subcutaneous fluids, tube feeding, force feeding, wound care, etc.

Most animals come in dehydrated and the most effective means to provide fluids and nourishment is through tube feeding. The process requires blending of fish, electrolytes, warm water, vitamins, and medication into a fish formula. This formula is fed to the animals by inserting a flexible tube into the stomach using large syringes. As soon as the animals are hydrated and stable, we wean them to eat whole fish.

Release

Once an animal has gained an optimal weight and is competing for food, it's ready for release. Prior to release, each animal is tagged with an identification number. The color-coded tags indicate the animal has been rehabilitated and helps identify the specific animal and care center in case the animal needs care in the future. We strive to return every one of our patients back to the wild once their care with us is complete.

Research

An important part of marine mammal recovery is ongoing research. Research is being done to find the pathological conditions that affect the marine mammals of Southern California. Only through this research are we able to discover the cause-effect relationships that can help us to understand the best means to rehabilitate our marine mammal patients.

In today's reading Karana finds an otter that was left by the hunters. She spends time with it and nurses it back to health in its own environment. She realizes that she has built trust and a relationship with the otter. She sees it with its babies and watches her teach its young to swim and hunt. She vows to never kill and otter again.

3. Karana had not had time to prepare for the winter storing food. What change had to occur for her to get supplied again?
4. Karana is surrounded by animals. She refers to them as her children. How does this compare to what she wanted for herself? Is she happy with the life she has at this point? What has she continued to do to remain positive?
5. Karana sees the otter again and realizes it is a female and has two pups. She watches the otter teach her young how to swim and eat. She befriended the otter and vowed never to kill one again. What has changed for Karana? How has she become responsible and a steward for the things around her?

Analyze Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 156

“After that summer, after being friends with Won-a-nee and her young, I never killed another otter. I had an otter cape for my shoulders, which I used until it wore out, but never again did I make a new one. Nor did I ever kill another cormorant for its beautiful feathers, though they have long thin necks and make ugly sounds when they talk to each other. Nor did I kill seals for their sinews, using instead kelp to bind the things that needed it. Nor did I kill another wild dog, nor did I try to spear another sea elephant” (p. 156).

Write Have each student write a short product based on today’s prompt to connect to the unit theme.

Why is it important to be respectful and responsible in relation to animals, sea life, plants, and birds? What would happen if we were not?

Write a one-paragraph narrative in which you describe a time you chose to be responsible even though it changed or altered your life. Introduce this scenario and describe the situation. Who was involved? What contributed to your choice?

Engage and orient the reader by establishing a context and point of view and introducing a narrator and/or characters; organize an event sequence that unfolds naturally and logically. Use narrative techniques, such as dialogue, pacing, and description, to develop experiences, events, and/or characters. Use a variety of transition words, phrases, and clauses to convey sequence and signal shifts from one frame to another. Use precise words and phrases, relevant descriptive details, and sensory language to capture the action and convey experiences and events. What is an earthquake? An earthquake is what happens when two blocks of the earth suddenly slip past one another. The surface where they slip is called the fault or fault plane. The location below the earth's surface where the earthquake starts is called the hypocenter, and the location directly above it on the surface of the earth is called the epicenter.

Sometimes an earthquake has foreshocks. These are smaller earthquakes that happen in the same place as the larger earthquake that follows. Scientists can't tell that an earthquake is a foreshock until the larger earthquake happens. The largest, main earthquake is called the main shock. Mainshocks always have aftershocks that follow. These are smaller earthquakes that occur afterwards in the same place as the mainshock. Depending on the size of the mainshock, aftershocks can continue for weeks, months, and even years after the mainshock!

In today's reading Karana experiences a large earthquake. It affects the land and the sea. Karana who has been in control of her life and environment since her tribe was killed is suddenly not in control.

Character Based Literacy Program Lesson Plan

Island of the Blue Dolphins, Final Writing Product

Major written product: Narrative Essay, the steps of the essay are embedded in the lesson plan so students can work progressively toward their final writing product. A general overview is listed below.

STEP 1: Autobiography/personal narrative:

- The goal of this unit is for you to write a personal narrative about a specific event in your life.
- Think of a memorable experience that happened over a short period of time.

STEP 2:

- Fill out a 5W's chart to help you collect your details.

STEP 3: Finish rough draft and review effective traits

- We are going to use this first personal narrative of the year to introduce the traits of effective writing.
- Note to teacher: Throughout this unit we will be revisiting the students' personal narratives and making revisions by examining different traits of effective writing. While a student and a teacher do not need to examine every trait in detail every time they write something, this initial writing activity provides us an opportunity to slow things down and take a closer look at what makes good writing.
- The object here is to focus on the process of revision- not just the product, or getting it turned in. For some of your students, this idea will take some getting used to.

STEP 4: Revising→Focus on Organization

- Today, take a closer look at how you have organized your paper. Jot down how you decided to tell your story. Did you start at the beginning and go to the end? Did you start with the ending and then cut to the beginning? When writing creatively, an author has choices to make. The choices he or she makes impact the reader's experience.
- Share your writing with a peer. Get feedback and make revisions. Do they think your story is well organized? How could it be clearer and stronger?

STEP 5: Revision and word choice

- Take a pencil and circle all the verbs in your paper.
- Then, go back and think about how you could make some of your choices more specific and colorful.
- Teachers, model what this could look like.

- Teachers, you may also want to put up a 'boring word graveyard' on your wall. This is where you and the students decide on all the words that are 'dead' and that should not be used too often because they aren't specific enough. Examples: nice, pretty, beautiful etc. These can be verbs, nouns or modifiers.
- Also, start another word list on the wall that contains descriptive, creative, active verbs.
- Remember to remind students to use the thesaurus as necessary.
- After they have gone through and revised their verbs, have them do the same thing with nouns.

STEP 6: Revision with modifiers (specifically adverbs today)

- Take a look at your paper. By now you have added more colorful verbs.
- Circle any adverbs you already have in your paper.
- Can you revise any of these to make your writing clearer to your reader?
- Now go back and ask yourself if there are any additional adverbs you would like to add.
- Make those changes

STEP 7: Revision with modifiers (specifically adjectives today)

- Look at your paper. You have added more specific nouns.
- Circle any adjectives you already have in your paper.
- Can you revise any of these to make your writing clearer to your reader?
- Now go back and ask yourself if there are any additional adjectives you would like to add.
- Make those changes/additions.

STEP 8: Revision and voice

- Think of a song or singer that you think has a strong voice in his or her music.
- How would you describe that voice?
- You have the same thing. You are a unique individual with your own voice.
- Share your writing with someone who knows you and your voice-either a peer, teacher, aide, or parent. Ask them if you think your writing sounds like YOU.
- What could you add to make it sound more like you?
- Make revisions as necessary.

STEP 9: Revision and dialogue

- Add at least 1 series of dialogue to your story.

STEP 10: Revision and reflections

- Add reflections where you see appropriate.

STEP 11: Revision and sentence style

- Vary your sentence length and structure.
- Examine transitions.
- Are your sentences easy to hear/listen to?

- Make appropriate revisions.

STEP 12: Editing and correct copy

- Have students correct punctuation, spelling, grammar and capitalization
- Tomorrow they will peer edit, so don't have them write their final copies yet.

STEP 13: GROUP/PEER ADVISING

- Students should practice being in the listener's role and give constructive feedback to a peer.

STEP 14: Response checklist

- Have students use the checklist to guide any last responses to their paper.
- Word process final drafts.
