What Characterizes Utopia?

The concept of utopia refers to an ideal community or society. This word was coined by Sir Thomas More (1477–1535) who used it to describe a perfect imaginary world. In utopian societies, citizens have all of their needs fulfilled. By imagining an utopian society, readers can explore what modern society should strive to accomplish and the extent to which utopia is possible.

RESPOND

Timeline Agree on the facts in today’s reading and list the 3-5 most important events on the timeline.

Students might mention:

- Eli and Randy try to ride their bikes out of town to see an old sports car. This is the farthest Eli has ever been from home.
- Eli falls ill during the bike ride and is airlifted to the Health Clinic by members of the Surety.
- Randy announces he is moving to Colorado to live with his grandparents.
- Amber recounts obtaining a copy of USA Today four months earlier.

This reading lesson will include a scientific exploration of genes and genetic modification that pairs with Masterminds exploration of the relationship between genetics, ethics, and identity. At the end of the lesson, students can have a higher concept of genetics as it relates to the book’s themes, can have analyzed ethical concepts, and can have formulated a deeper understanding of the character’s situations.

Lessons 1–4 provide a foundational understanding of DNA and genes. Lessons 5–7 introduce genetically modified organisms and ethical analysis of gene modification. Lessons 8–12 introduce cloning and ethical analysis of cloning. Lesson 13 focuses on traits that are both inherited and obtained through experiences.

Students will either write about the concept in their own words or draw a picture depicting the main idea. Students can use the worksheet titled “Exploration of Genes and Genetic Modification.” The worksheet has a numbered section for each day.

Today, Day 1, you will research DNA and genes.

Click here to watch a short video about DNA. After the video, read the sections entitled “DNA is all the same chemical,” “The human genome,” and “Your DNA makes you unique.”

If the hyperlink does not work, you can find the information by copying and pasting this URL <https://learn.genetics.utah.edu/content/basics/dna>. Or you can visit <https://learn.genetics.utah.edu>, click on Basic Genetics, click on the video “What are DNA & Genes?”

Draw a picture or write a description to explain the concept in Box 1 of the worksheet “Exploration of Genes and Genetic Modification.”

EXPLORE

Discussion Ask discussion questions.

Answer the key questions. Use evidence from the text.

1. What ideas support Eli’s hunch that his dad may not be telling the truth about the helicopter?
2. How would you describe an “honor system?”
3. Why do you think the Pax prints different news than USA Today?
4. Why did Amber hide the USA Today newspaper?

Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 30

“One thing bothers me, though. Why doesn’t the Pax print the bad stories that are in the USA Today? Is it because we don’t have to worry about things like murder? Just because we live here doesn’t mean we shouldn’t know about the outside world. What about someone like poor Randy? When he gets to his grandparents, will he be ready?”

EXTEND

Write a short product based on today’s prompt to connect to the unit theme.

In this unit, you will write about key virtues that are either central or missing in Serenity.

Today’s virtue is honesty – one of the three Essential Qualities of Serenity.

- Define honesty and provide an example from the story.

Write 1–2 paragraphs. Provide evidence from the text. Use as many details as possible.

What is free will?

Free will is defined as the ability to act independently and do the things you want to do. When you have free will you make choices on your own and are not confined to a plan created by others. You can choose one thing among several alternatives to live your life in the best possible way. However, having free will does not preclude the duty of people to be law-abiding and socially responsible. Possessing the freedom for self-determination still require individuals to abide by moral codes and the norms and laws of their family, school, city, and country.

"She gives me a mischievous grin, which makes her appear even younger. 'That's classified, mister.'"

"Classified?"

"You know," she explains, "like government secrets." She stares at me, puzzled that I don't understand."

"It's not honest to keep secrets," I say.

"Sometimes things have to be kept from us for our own good. Like national security. If the president told everybody his plan for that, he'd also be telling the enemy."

"I'm even more confused. 'who's the enemy?'"

"She looks flustered. 'well, there isn't one now. I'm just explaining why certain information has to be classified.'"

What characterizes close friendships?

Close friendships often have three main traits: integrity, caring, and congeniality. Integrity means there is trust, loyalty, and honesty in a friendship. Someone may express this trait when they say “I feel free to talk to my friend about almost anything.” Caring means there is empathy, help, and support in a friendship. This trait is seen when people say “my friend would listen if I talked about my problems.” Congeniality means that the friends are fun to be around and help build self-confidence; “having fun with my friends make me feel good about myself.”

There are about a million things wrong with that logic. For example, if Randy already knew what he wanted to say before he left, why didn't he just say it? What could be so secret? We don't keep secrets here."

What is a rebellion?

A rebellion is an uprising of people who are refusing to accept the current status or order. To rebel is to resist authority and act in a manner that defies convention. Those who lead a rebellion are often seeking social or political change; or rebel as a way to express themselves. Civilians may challenge rules and dissent against policies that they see as discriminatory or harmful. Dissent does not necessarily mean lack of loyalty or patriotism, as it is directed towards regulations rather than civil identity.

What is ethical research?

Research provides the empirical information needed for accurate awareness and understanding of the world around us. When doing research, it is important to do it in an ethical way. Ethical research considers factors before, during, and after the research process. One of the most important factors is how the research impacts the study participants and those informed by the study results. Researchers have to treat human participants with dignity and respect. That includes providing information about the purpose and the value of the study. Another ethical responsibility of the researchers is to protect the confidentiality and well-being of the participants. Ethical research findings are accurate and based on unbiased methods of data collection and analysis.

Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 103–104

“I’ll always remember those afternoons as the time that I leave Serenity for good. Not physically, of course. But that’s when the whole idea of the town—the honesty, harmony, and contentment— ceases to have meaning for me. I’m lying to them, and I don’t even feel bad about it, because they’re lying to me. It may look like harmony in my room, but that’s all phony. And for sure, I’m not feeling very content about it.”

Is it moral to deny access to information?

Deliberately limiting access to information that is relevant and valuable, and which does not compromise the security of others, is unethical. Limiting access to information can take different shapes. For example, when African American slaves were denied education, lack of literacy skills limited their access to printed information. When dictatorships censor and filter the print and online media, they limit public access to valuable information about current events. Treating individuals with respect and dignity includes allowing them to make informed decisions based on relevant facts.

Why do scientific experiments have a control group?

A control group is used so researchers can attribute the observed outcomes to the hypothesized predictor. For example, researchers are studying if nutrients help a plant grow faster. One plant is given nutrients and the other is given standard water. The one given water is in the control group. Since the plant was only given water, it provides a comparison of how the nutrients affected the other plants growth. Both the control group and the experiment group are treated the same way and exposed to the same environment, this way it is easier to observe how the experiment is working.

What is the nature versus nurture debate?

The nature versus nurture debate questions which factors have a stronger influence on human behavior: biological factors (e.g., genes and heredity) or social factors (e.g., home environment and education). Are we born a particular way, or do we acquire traits throughout life? The nature side of the argument sees that a person is primarily influenced by their genetic inheritance and biology. The nurture side sees that a person is primarily influenced by external things such as exposure to the environment and learning. Some researchers in the scientific field say a person is influenced by both.

What does it mean to have autonomy?

Autonomy refers to a person's degree of independence. Everybody has some level of autonomy in their lives, although the amount may differ depending on the situation. For example, children have limited autonomy in where they live, but may have more autonomy when choosing how to dress, how to play, and how to behave. When we use this ability to decide for ourselves and chose what actions to take, we are practicing personal autonomy.

How do people handle grief and loss?

When people experience some form of loss or grief, there are five stages that are generally experienced: denial, anger, bargaining, depression, and acceptance. People often start in a state of denial, they do not want to believe the loss has occurred. Next people often feel anger. During bargaining people try to negotiate a way to prevent the loss from occurring. When bargains do not work, people begin to feel sad about the loss. When people reach acceptance, they accept the loss has occurred. Even though these are presented as stages, some people skip a stage, and some alternate between them. Imagine the stages as fluid rather than linear.

What is the fight-or-flight-or freeze response?

Fight-or-flight is a biological and physical response to a fearful situation. When a person experiences fear the brain triggers certain hormones to help react to the stimuli or retreat away from it; the body reacts in ways to help us survive. This response is characterized by racing heart, anxiety, sweating, and shaking. Sometimes people are so scared that they feel frozen in place, such as a deer in the headlights of a car. An example on flight is a person seeing a lion loose in the park and running away for survival. An example on fight is a person feeling angry and embarrassed after being criticized, so they feel their fists clench and a desire to yell.

Key Paragraph, p. 285–286

“I am scraped and bruised and bleeding all over. Everything hurts, and yet for some reason, I feel terrific. It takes a moment before I realize why. The paralyzing headache and nausea are gone. When the truck blew up, it took the barrier generator with it. A rush of exhilaration comes over me. The walls of our prison were never brick and mortar, but they were just as real. For the first time in our lives, we’re free.”

What does it mean to have courage?

Having courage means a person is willing to confront an uncertain or frightening situation. A person can show courage physically by being present in the situation, or morally by acting courageously in a situation. For example, a firefighter shows physical courage by running into a burning building and moral courage by choosing to do the right thing for others. Having courage is having bravery and standing up for what you think is right.

READ

Review the timeline from the beginning every day.

Read the selection, usually in a Shared Reading Read React Predict Cycle of 2-3 pages.

RESPOND

Timeline Agree on the facts in today’s reading and list the 3-5 most important events on the timeline.

Students might mention:

Map Add to ongoing class activities like a KWL chart or map.

Today, Day 12, you will practice cloning Mimi the mouse on an interactive webpage.

Click here for the activity “Click and Clone.”

If the URL does not work, copy and paste this URL

<https://learn.genetics.utah.edu/content/cloning/clickandclone/>. Or visit <https://learn.genetics.utah.edu/>, click on Cloning, click on “Click and Clone.”

Analyze

1. Mini-Mimi became a clone of Mimi. Although Mini-Mini looks like Mimi, they are now individual mice. Because Mini-Mimi is an individual, she has the right to an open future. This means that Mini-Mimi is not expected to be just like the mouse she is cloned from, rather she is given the potential to be any kind of mouse she wants to be.
2. How would the idea of an open future pertain to a human clone? Would you expect the clone to be just like the person it was cloned from? Or are they free to develop into the type of person they want to be?
3. Relate the right to an open future to the character in the book. Were they given this right?

Draw a picture or write a description to explain the concept in box 12.

EXPLORE

Discussion Ask discussion questions.

Answer the key questions. Use evidence from the text.

1. What evidence do we have that Tori showed a lot of strength, both physically and mentally?
2. Why do you think Malik was angry at Hector for not jumping off the factory truck in time?
3. What motivated Tori, Amber, Malik, and Eli to keep walking through the forest?

Analyze the key paragraph.

Key Paragraph, p. 297

“Here’s what haunts me: If we didn’t have to rush our plan in order to get me out of Happy Valley before Weeding Day, could we have come up with a better way to do it that didn’t get Hector killed? If I didn’t cheat on tests and gorge myself on cookies and cupcakes and get myself classified as “toxic”; if I wasn’t such a big jerk, would Hector still be alive?”

Instructions

1. What emotions are Hector feeling in this moment?
2. Do you think Malik is justified in feeling responsible? Why or why not?

EXTEND

What is resiliency?

Resiliency is the process of navigating difficult situations, hardship, and stress and being able to cope or adapt. Resiliency involves changing both actions, thoughts, and behaviors in ways that help a person recover. People can become resilient by making goals, having confidence, communicating with others, problem solving, and managing emotions. The way a person recovers is unique to them, and is something everyone can do. Groups of people can show resiliency too, as seen by communities rebuilding their neighborhoods after natural disasters.

Today, Day 13, you will learn about traits. Notice the types of traits that are inherited and those that are influenced by the environment.

Click here to watch a short video called “What are Traits?” and read “Identical twins: same DNA, different environment.”

If the hyperlink does not work, copy and paste the URL

<https://learn.genetics.utah.edu/content/basics/traits/>. Or visit <https://learn.genetics.utah.edu>, click on Basic Genetics, click on “What are Traits?”

Analyze

1. Clones can be seen as identical twins that are born at different times. Even though they are identical in their DNA, twins and clones are not guaranteed to be exact duplicates. What is your reaction to the statement: “You are more than your genes.”
2. Is it ethical to treat a person a certain way based on their genetics? What other traits should be considered?
3. Consider the character in the book. What traits do you think they developed genetically, and which to you think they learned from the environment?

Draw a picture or write a description to explain the concept in box 13.

Instructions

1. Did Eli, Malik, Amber, Tori, and Hector act like masterminds? How so?
2. Do you think they lived up to their genetic expectations or defied them? Provide examples.
